Canadian delegates will present at the London Congress of the Chamber of Commerce for the Empire in July, when it is expected that Imperial Federation will be one of the leading subjects of discussion. A. White. Toasts were proposed to the Queen, the ex-chief and chief of the fire brigade, the press and the ladies, and were responded to with a flow of wit and eloquence.

REPLY TO SENATOR PERLEY.

To the Editor of THE LEADER:

SIR,—I notice in the Standard of 11 inst. that Senator Perley has been spreading himself on the subject of Provincial Autonomy. Now this is a subject on which the average man does not know as much as he ought to. I am an average man and Senator Perley is evidently another. Nevertheless I so far agree with the Senator that the ventilation of the subject given by us may tend to throw fresh light on it. Mr. Haultain is said to advocate provincial autonomy chiefly because we cannot get sufficient money from the Federal Government to run the country properly. Mr. Perley says that if Mr. Haultain would accept the services of the North-West members and the two Senators, their influence with the Government would be so overpowering that we should secure an ample grant. Why? It seems to me that the proper party to make representations to the Dominion Government is the North-West Executive, and that the influence of four party men and two equally party Senators would be small. Mr. Perley's chief objection to our having provincial autonomy is the fear lest we should run into debt for the purpose of building railways and public works. I don't think this should alarm him. Do not most of us as private individuals run into debt for the purpose of developing our business? Probably the Senator has done so himself. The best farmers and business men most certainly do so. And what progressive and civilized country is there that has not its national debt? Take New Zealand a country which in point of population and resources perhaps most nearly resembles the Territories. It has its debt, but it owns its railroads and is prosperous.

Mr. Perley gets a little mixed on the subject of raising a revenue in our prospective province. In one place he says farm land is the only thing from which we could raise a revenue and that that would not amount to much because we could not sell it, in which case Mr. Perley may set his mind at rest, assured that that will not amount to much either, as no capitalists will advance money without security. But in another part of his letter Mr. Perley says minerals, forests and fish are valuable sources of wealth, but the food producing country is the greatest of all.

Perhaps so, but it follows if we accept this axiom that it will stand taxation with the greater ease, and produce the biggest revenue.

Cannot Mr. Perley see how inconsistent it is for us (without any protest from W. D. P.) to allow our towns, municipalities and even school districts to raise money for public works, and yet to deny the privilege to a country the size of all the Maritime provinces put together?

To read the Senator's remarks on immigration one would suppose that he was a trade unionist, and regarded every immigrant as a possible competitor and blackleg. He says "they the immigrants are not worth one dollar to any of the local governments." To be consistent Mr. Perley should set up a Chinese wall (the Conservatives know what that is at the Manitoba boundary) and not allow another immigrant to enter the Territories. In the meantime it would appear that every Government and every little district goes into raptures over the arrival of every batch of these new comers who are not worth a red cent. Strange, isn't it? I am at one with Mr. Perley in thinking that if the pots to be provincial government there should be but one province for the whole of the Territories, and while $500 may be enough to pay our local members, still one cannot help thinking that a member of the Senate who draws $1,000, besides perquisites and travelling expenses (which he pockets), is not the man to cast the first stone.

As I was about to conclude this letter my eye caught the final sentence of Mr. Perley's epistle: "Then will be the time when we will want the right men in the right place." Taking this in connection with the Senator's further wild attacks on Mr. Haultain, we are justified in assuming that on this idea his whole article was based. Until we get the Senator's nominees in the Executive we are to mark time. How pleasant!

C. L. DICKINSON.

QU'APPELLE STATION.

Mr. Essen, of Brandon, has purchased the unmanufactured material on hand in the Qu'Appelle felt factory, a carload of which was shipped on Monday. Mr. R. Johnston was fined $10 last week for allowing a fire to escape from his farm while burning stubble.

The polo club dance was not as largely attended as usual, but a very pleasant time was enjoyed by those present.

The collection made throughout the country in aid of the patriotic fund has been most loyally responded to and the total will be between three and four hundred dollars. Mr. F. W. Colclough, superintendent of the Dominion fish hatchery at Selkirk, arrived on Friday with a few million white fish fry, and with Fishery Inspector Miller, went out to the Fort, where they were safely deposited in the Qu'Appelle lakes. We trust that our local fish supply will become more abundant in a year or two as the result. We understand that Crooked and Round lakes also received a supply. A more even growth of crop has probably never been recorded in the N. W. T. than that of this year, and though some farmers would like rain, there is evidently enough moisture in the land to last a long time yet. The favorable seeding season is permitting many farmers to do what few have done before, viz., put in their oats decently. The baseball club is doing some good practising and should give a good account of itself when the gala days come on.

Supreme Court Sitting at Regina.

Judge Richardson held a special court at Regina on Tuesday last to try the following cases: Crown vs. J. Emerson, A. Hayward and De Philpo, for theft at Moose Jaw; Crown vs. John Clark for theft, and D'Oyley Carte vs. Dennis, Pocklington, Brown, Briggs, Hamilton, Fraser, Haultain and Balfour re infringement of play-right, in the Pirates of Penzance case.

For a year cases of theft have been numerous at Moose Jaw, the thieves being bold enough to appropriate parcels from the station platform. This week three arrests were made and conviction secured. In April a box containing butter and other farm produce was shipped from Elkhorn to A. Smith of Moose Jaw. The box was missed from the platform at Moose Jaw and soon after J. Emerson, waiter in the C.P.R. hotel, was arrested, charged with the theft. Further investigation led to the arrest of two accomplices, A. Hayward, who assisted to remove the box, and an Italian, De Philpo, who secreted the stolen property. They had arranged to set up a bachelor's shack and live on the contents of the box. Emerson and the Italian are old offenders. De Philpo was the Italian implicated in the stabbing affair in the Ottawa hotel at Moose Jaw some time ago. As soon as the first case was settled a second charge was entered against Emerson and he pleaded guilty to stealing rings belonging to the kitchen maid. Emerson was sentenced to one year's hard labor in Regina jail, Hayward to nine months and De Phillpo to six. A bunch of thirty-two keys, filed and twisted into many shapes was found in the Italian's possession. Hayward and Emerson are both young Englishmen, aged 19 and 22 respectively. The latter wore Salvation Army uniform.

John Clark, a settler at Weyburn, was accused of stealing a horse belonging to Thos. Good of Indian Head. Clark rode the horse across country to Weyburn and disposed of it for a suit of clothes and $5 to Adolphus Martin. He was very penitent and promised good behaviour. He was given six months.

The case for infringement of play right was adjourned until next Saturday, after hearing a partial examination of T. A. Briggs, touching the matter.

THE LEGISLATURE.

even if they had private assurances, they could not act before the Federal House met. If they did questions would be asked in the Dominion House and there might be embarrassment and inconvenience. If, however the financial grant were on a fixed basis, the Territorial House could meet at a date most convenient to itself, because it would be easy to frame the estimates. Now the first resolution (No. 14) dealt with the present position of the Territories. The House was confronted with the actual position as it existed. They had to deal with the question not only on its financial side, for there were other sides, there was the constitutional side. No matter whether they got their finances on a permanent basis, for two years or ten years, there were certain other things necessary for the proper carrying on of the business of the House. They had to, to extend, extension was going on as population increased, and conditions became more complicated. Whatever the postponement of the financial question; however long a time it might be, it was the duty of the Assembly, an absolute necessity to ask for an extension of their power, not in ten years, or two years, but now, immediately. (Cheers.) They had not the power to regulate their own constitution. They ought to have it. There was no reason why they should not have it. There were several points involved that made it difficult to pass election laws, and they had no power to disqualify even a member of their own House. Again, they ought to have the power to administer criminal justice. There were no reasons why they should not; there were many reasons why they should. The Territories administered the civil law, and under the present system practically two sets of officials had to be kept up in the country. The Crown agency should be done by the Attorney General. Then they should have certainly, and had often asked for, the control of the registry offices. The important power to legislate in regard to property and civil rights that the Assembly already had was practically taken away by the Dominion Government dealing with land titles. On every side the Territories met with difficulties in regard to land titles, and if they had the right to deal with property, including land, they could make many improvements in general legislation. He believed that if this additional power were granted, if their land titles system were local, they would reduce very much the number of fees charged for various services performed. Now, it might be asked, why come down with a resolution upon this question at this time? Why should it be put so formally as by an address to the Governor General? He would say that the treatment hitherto accorded by the Dominion Government to the memorials and the resolutions already sent, had been such as to make it undesirable to continue that line of somewhat informally dealing with the subject. They had arrived at a time when they were confronted with A VERY LARGE PRACTICAL NECESSITY, and the House should in the most formal way, not satisfied with the treatment dealt out to the Territories, ask that its financial claims be enquired into. (Hear hear.) That was all he proposed to say in regard to the first resolution. It spoke for itself. It dealt altogether with the practical necessities of the position: it dealt with them as they were. It was generally admitted by every member of the House that more money was needed, and more power; and there could be no objection to the strongest demands from the quarter from which alone they must derive both the money and the power. (Cheers.) He now come to the second resolution (No. 15.). Before taking up the resolution he would simply ask the House to go over the recitals which led up to it. They showed and suggested the development of the method of action. The intention by Parliament to give institutions to this country, the restriction that anything done should be subject to the British North America Act after the country was acquired for the benefit, be it remembered, of eastern markets and eastern trade; the consistent method which had been followed to establish institutions bearing analogy to the institutions of the provinces; all these, running through every document, though every act of Parliament, and through ever official statement made, all showed that the institutions of the North-West Territories should bear analogy to those of the provinces, and be dealt with under the British North American Act and the principle underlying. A question would be raised at the very outset: How long should the gradual development of their present institutions to go on? Well, he should say it should go on until the question was settled. (Hear hear.) To begin with he would point out that the institutions should be as nearly exact as possible to the provincial institutions. Their present position was an impossible one. They had

of obtaining an increase in the grants.

(To be continued next week.)

PROROGATION.

Precisely at half past three on Friday afternoon a trumpet flourish announced the arrival of Lieutenant Governor Forget to prorogue the Assembly. His Honor entered the House, accompanied by Supt. Strickland, N.W.M.P., as aide de camp, and having given assent to the bills passed by the Legislature prorogued the House by the following speech:

Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly: In relieving you of your legislative duties I desire to thank you for the diligent consideration which you have given to the matters to which your attention has been directed. I am glad to observe the unanimity with which the proposals submitted by my Government for meeting the present and immediate necessities, as well as the future position and condition of these Territories, have met your approval. I thank you for the supplies granted for the Public Service, and while regretting the sad occurrence at Ottawa and Hull, I am glad to observe that you have given practical expression to the sympathetic feelings of the people of the Territories for the suffering of our fellow countrymen in those cities. I now bid you farewell in full confidence that your labors will conduce to the welfare of the Territories.

Mr. G. H. V. Bulyea, Territorial Secretary, then announced the prorogation and the proceedings terminated.
